

Automatically Open Google Search Results in a New Tab

BY HAMMAD SALEEM ON AUGUST 14, 2012 IN HOW-TO

By default, when you search for anything from Google.com, it opens the search results in the same tab. This can be annoying since you have to go back and forth in the same tab when researching a topic. In that scenario, it's always a good idea to open each search result in a new tab so you can quickly navigate between tabs. Here's how to change that default behavior.

First, log in to your Google account. It's not necessary to login to change the settings, but logging in lets you save your settings. Then click the gear icon.

Then select Search Settings.
